PREFACE.

I HAVE been questioned as to my method of selecting the remedy. This little book is the answer. It is no secret, but is attended with more difficulty and painstaking labor than many imagine.

I have often received cases for letter consultation in which they were so poorly, or meagerly taken, that no one could prescribe with any degree of accuracy. In others the work was so well done that I could do much both to help cure the case, and many times help the doctor to hold his patient, who would have sought relief elsewhere.

HOW TO TAKE THE CASE AND TO FIND THE SIMILIMUM.

MANY failures to select the right remedy for the sick is due to a failure along the line of properly taking the case. We might as well undertake to recognize a person by looking at his hand, or hand and foot, as to cover the case with the appropriate remedy from a few symptoms when there are many to come into the complete picture.

Often times in a case half reported the very symptoms that are most important, so far as the selection of the remedy is concerned, are left out. This is especially true with the homœopathic method of prescribing. It is so natural for a patient to think that if he tells us that he has a cold, or indigestion, or rheumatism, that we ought to be able to prescribe for him forthwith, and strange to say, I have met more than one physician who seemed to have no better conception of Homœopathy than this; and evidenced it by asking such questions as, "doctor, what is your best remedy for diphtheria," or rheumatism, etc.

There is, of course, only one proper answer to such a question, from a homœopathic standpoint, viz., the indicated one.

Dr. Constantine Lippe once told
