PREFATORY NOTE.

THE Author is quite aware that in the following story there are many defects, but he hopes that the fidelity of the descriptions will in some measure atone for these. It may be interesting to the naturalist, whether young or old, to know that the account given by him of Buenos Ayres is founded on personal experience, and that his remarks on the curious animals that inhabit that country are the result of careful observation. The Illustrations relating to this part of the subject have been made from sketches taken by him on the spot.
