FOREWORD

The Book of the Yale Pageant, like the Pageant itself, aims to interpret the significance of Yale in the light of her history and traditions. For Yale is at heart a historic university. Pageant and Book alike unite many voices in utterance of a common loyalty. For Yale is in spirit a community. And Pageant and Book, by together recalling the birthright and inheritance of Yale, seek to suggest a prophecy while they record a history. For the enduring tradition of Yale is service.

The Yale Pageant is essentially an expression of the University rather than of the individual. In the Book which is its permanent memorial it seems inappropriate to emphasize individual services. Its contributors are either directly affiliated with Yale or peculiarly associated with her in service to the community and to the nation. To them and to the various officers, committees, and organizations listed elsewhere in the Book much is due. But only the coöperation with them of many here unnamed has made possible the community Pageant of the City and of the University.
