CHAPTER I

Our Sources of Information

FROM His own words, as recorded in the Gospels and in a few logia extant elsewhere, we may learn what Jesus taught concerning a future life; but our sources are not limited to these. In addition we have accounts of His life and personal experiences, and some of these bear upon the life that follows death—particularly His miracles of raising the dead, and His manifestations of Himself after His own resurrection. Further, we may bring into the question the teachings which His earliest disci-
