THE PUBLISHERS' ADDRESS.

THE origin of this long-wanted Work may soon be told. For many years past, as Publishers of Medical literature in many shapes, we have been in the habit of having the question put to us by anxious invalids, labouring under various forms of ill-health, as to "WHO THEY SHOULD CONSULT?"—by no means an unusual interrogation, though a very natural and common-sense question to the parties concerned, and often a vital one.

From common civility, to say nothing of the motives of humanity, we have endeavoured to answer these queries, not on our own responsibility so much as by the kind aid of some of our Medical patrons, competent to form an opinion on such matters, or to select, from among the several eminent Medical or Surgical authorities of this Metropolis, some one most suited to the case. That we have done so in many cases successfully, we feel assured; and this has led us to believe, that something more efficient, (after the fashion of this manual,) and calculated to extend its usefulness beyond our limited sphere, might not only do still more good, but, at the same time, save a vast deal of trouble, and serve the purpose much better.

Struck with this idea, we sought the assistance of a highly distinguished member of the Medical Profession, well qualified, as will be seen, to carry out our views, and one to whom the claims of his Professional brethren are well known. To this gentleman we are indebted for the useful information to be found in these pages, which he agreed to pen, and we to publish, and hence the origin of the Work. Convinced, as we are, of its practical utility to thousands now in search of such a guide, and that it may save many a vast amount of mischief and human suffering (to say nothing of expense), if not sometimes serious and fatal consequences, we leave our book to make its own way.
