THE Author of this Little Volume may state that most of the Pieces have from time to time appeared in the columns of Newspapers and Periodicals.

In presenting them in a collected form, he will offer no apology,—the Public being the best judges of their merits or demerits.

They are the production of his leisure hours in the occupation of a Journeyman Wood Turner,—and their composition has at least served to wile away many an irksome hour, and relieve the tedium of a monotonous existence.
