*I*N college days, Sweetheart, when you and I
And Love and Hope are young, why should we sigh
For Future days, when happy is our lot;
When graver cares disturb us not a jot,
And Sorrow and Distress both pass us by?

*The world is young, unclouded is our sky;
We do not heed the thought that all must die;
On Life's clean page there is no marring blot,
In college days.*

*Still they must pass. Time in all times must fly;
The days of change are ever creeping nigh;
The joys we now share can not be forgot,
Yet still to come are those blest days, I wot,
Of sweet, deep bliss — too grave for us to try
