MY DEAR SIR:

THERE cannot be a more effectual way to connect the publication of a volume with pleasant reminiscences, than to associate it with the name of a cherished friend. It is therefore perfectly natural that I should inscribe the present volume to you as an offering of esteem and affection.

Wishing, rather than expecting, that the following pages may in part repay the gratification I have derived from yours, I indulge myself at once in a pleasure and an honor, by subscribing myself

YOUR FRIEND,

JAMES NACK.
