Late Mr Norman MacLehose

Mr Norman MacLehose, M.B., of 4 Cranby Place, S.W., who died on August 30, at the age of 72, was a man with many friends and interests, as well as being an oculist of distinction. He was the youngest son of Mr James MacLehose, the well-known bookseller, printer, and publisher, of Glasgow, and was born on January 19, 1859. He received his early medical training at Glasgow University, and for a short time was attached to the Glasgow Children's Hospital. In the middle eighties he came South, and was for a while in general practice at Sevenoaks, before going to Berlin and Vienna for 12 months' preparatory to specialising in eye work. On his return to London he was attached to the Moorfields Hospital, and later he joined the staff of the Central London Ophthalmic Hospital. He acquired a considerable private practice. He leaves a widow and one son, Hamish. The younger son, Crawford, fell in the war.

Note

IT was suggested to his sons that the publications of James MacLehose, Publisher and Bookseller to the University, who till his death in 1885 took a very warm interest in the University of Glasgow, might be presented to the University Library and kept together as a memorial of him, and of his connection with the University; and Mr. James Lymburn, Librarian to the University, who made this suggestion, proposed also that the series should be continued to the present date.

It has been a pleasure to carry out this idea. The entries in the following list are copied from those in the Catalogue of the University Library, and represent 578 volumes published by the firm from 1838 to 1905. Very many of these books are now out of print, but copies of all have been procured with the exception of the seven which are marked with an asterisk.

Included in this collection is a series of 1121 Pamphlets and Prints arranged chronologically and bound in sixty volumes. These were published between the years 1838 and 1905; a large number of them relate to the University, and all were issued by the University Publishers.

Associated with the late James MacLehose, Bookseller and Publisher to the University, in the production of these books was his younger brother, Mr. Robert MacLehose, for many years Printer to the University. He retired in 1894, when his interest in the University Press passed into the hands of his nephews, Robert MacLehose and James J. MacLehose, who had already succeeded their father as Booksellers and Publishers to the University.

The engraving prefixed to this volume is from the portrait by Mr. G. Lowes Dickinson.
