"It is a work of incontestable genius. Nothing, in my judgment, by Edgar Allan Poe, to be genetous, is to be compared to it; it has all his weird and eerie power, but combined with a graphic realism that immensely heightens the effect. I read it in a four-wheeled cab the other night, by the help of a reading lamp, as I travelled through miles of snowbound streets, quite unconscious of the external circumstances of that melancholy journey. What is worth mentioning, because otherwise a good many people will miss it, is that a noble moral underlies the marvelous tale." —James Payn in The Independent.

It's ill to loose the bands that God decreed to bind ;
Still will we be the children of the heather and the wind.
Far away from home, O it's still for you and me
That the broom is blowing bonnie in the north countrie.
