PREFACE

THIS Book has grown out of the author's experience. For nearly fifteen years he has been directly connected with Religious Education, as Sunday School teacher, Superintendent, Diocesan Director of Religious Education, and Master of Method in a Church Training College for Schoolmasters. Everything that is written has been tested by experience.

The title of the Book is suggested by the second part of Mr. E. Holmes' Book—'What Is and What Might Be.'

In view of the uncertainty of the future of Religious Education in the Day Schools, the author believes that the responsibility thrown upon the Sunday School will be greater in the future than ever before. He believes that England will be what the next generation makes it, and that the next generation will be largely what we make it. Therefore the conscientious Sunday School teacher is to-day performing one of the truest acts of National service.

The Book consists of three parts. Parts I and II deal with psychology and pedagogy respectively, and Part III is a short Appendix.

E. F. B.

OXON.
