PHILOSOPHY AND FROTH.

---

While an aristocrat is democratic with dignity, a parvenu is ostentatious with insolence.

✽

It is right to be what you are, but sometimes not to be what you seem.

✽

Delicacy will respect the confidence of a reserved mind as an additional compliment to oneself.

✽

As a commonplace personality can never become cosmopolitan, so an original personality can never be wholly provincial.

✽

The instinct of the thoroughbred is to be relied on, always in preference to the dray.

A grande dame is not necessarily a grand woman.

✽

A lady should accept no financial recognition from a lover, while all the love and attention he cares to pay.

✽

There are depths in life and there are graces in life. There are times for the depths and times for the grace.

✽

The charm of an intimate relation is held by not being intimate, while intimate.

✽

It requires the instinct of a grande dame with the nameless touch of a personality to indulge an amour, yet retain its fragrance.

✽

In the midst often of mundane affairs are the bravest battles being waged.

✽

Greatness is the quality that conceives. Ability the power to execute.
