PREFACE.

THE following work has been composed in the hope that it may be found useful to young persons engaged in the study of the Scriptures, and that it may also prove not unacceptable to those of more advanced years.

The Questions are of a miscellaneous character, in order to awaken greater attention and excite more interest.

Considerable care has been taken in forming an opinion on points on which commentators have differed; but all theological discussion has been studiously avoided.

Much attention has been given to the Chronology, in which the authority of the best Jewish writers has been followed, whose care and attention to this subject cannot be too highly appreciated.

If some of the Questions should be thought too difficult for children going through the book for the first time, these may be omitted, and learned on a second perusal; by this means, the young learner will proceed from the easier to the more difficult parts of the subject—a principle worthy of attention, both in the study of the Holy Scriptures and in the acquirement of all other knowledge.

To the authorities made use of, the compilers have to express their acknowledgment. They have not confined themselves exclusively to Jewish writers, but have often consulted other commentators with much advantage, thus following the precept קבל האמת ממי שאתה "receive the truth wherever it is found."
