TO C. M. F.

I call to thee, dear comrade, as I pass
 With garlands green, to deck, as in our youth,
 The ancient shrines of Honor, Love, and Truth.
Before their altars, in untrodden grass,
We kneel together; turning then to greet
 The flame of Poesy, whose untended fire
 Still burns, to meet the soul's unquenched desire.
Nor these the only paths to claim our feet:
 For thou wilt lead where nature's beauty, hid
In sylvan solitudes, is known to thee,
 Of tree and fern and sailing cloudlet born.
If thou be with me, I go companied
 With Grace and Gaiety, and a spirit free
And buoyant, as the happy winds of morn.
