TO ROBERT OGILVIE KIRKWOOD

Since we met sixteen years ago we have sailed on many seas; yet I think we both have steered by the same stars. Permit me to dedicate this story to you, because no one more than yourself will understand that it is written in good faith.

I think most of us can say that an Unknown Woman has stood at the turning point of our lives, shown the right road, and vanished. This tale of an Unknown Woman is my grateful tribute to two people—to yourself and to Her.

New York City,
15th September, 1912.
