P R E F A C E.

It has been the object of the writer in this Volume to make plain to the understanding of every person, the nature of Money and the offices which it performs in economical affairs. In the second Volume, the nature of the devices employed for economizing the use of real Money, and the relationship of these devices to financial economy, embracing the credit system, banking, sources of wealth, national debts, funding systems, taxation, tariffs, and duties, as well as the phenomena of the Money market, will be the principal topics.

BROOKLYN, DECEMBER 24th, 1864.
