EDITOR'S NOTE TO SECOND SERIES

FORASMUCH as a good many friends of E. D. have cared for the little book, "Fragments from Old Letters, E. D. to E. D. W., 1869-1892," the Editor has now brought together a second series—intended to be the final—out of the same sequence of letters. The limits of dates are the same—ending October 1892.

To these one letter of 1895 is added.

The Index now supplied covers both series. The two volumes should, as far as convenient, be read simultaneously, for their chronology is intermingled.

The second series has less literary criticism than the first, and more biographical touches and light gossip, thus filling up with his own words a portrait of the writer in one aspect of his life.
