THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

P R E F A C E

THIS little volume is based throughout upon the late Mr. Napier's copious and exhaustive Commentaries on the Law of Prescription, a work which must always be valuable as a repository of profound learning and ingenious argument, but which would, perhaps, have possessed greater practical utility had it been somewhat less diffuse. Many cases bearing upon the subject of Prescription have been decided during the forty years that have elapsed since Mr. Napier's book was published; and to most of these it is hoped that reference will be found in the following pages.

The accepted sources of doctrine and information have, of course, been freely drawn upon, and need not here be particularised. I am bound, however, to pay a special acknowledgment to that portion of his great work on Landownership in which Mr. Rankine has treated of the Positive Prescription. I have also to record my unfeigned gratitude to my friends Mr. Baillie and Mr. Blackburn for their kindness in undertaking, and their diligence in performing, the task of verifying the references; as well as for offering many valuable suggestions. It need scarcely be said that for all errors the author alone is responsible.
