BRITISH Christians are indebted to American Divines for several valuable works admirably adapted to interest and improve the young. Mr. Taylor, of the most celebrated Theological Seminary in the United States, has increased our obligations, by this ingenious effort to engage children and youth in studying the perfect example JEZUS. His undertaking, as he states, was suggested by the publication of an eminent Prussian divine: but whatever hints Mr. Taylor may have derived from that work, the praise belongs to himself of having produced a volume which will be highly prized by parents, especially mothers, throughout Great Britain.

Christianity is seen in its greatest beauty in the amiable temper and the active virtues of the Holy SAVIOUR; and divines of the highest distinction have,
