"Then the people rejoiced for that [the princes] offered willingly, because with perfect heart they offered willingly to the Lord."—1. CHRON. xxix. 9.

"The trial of wealth is usually so little realized that practically nobody is unwilling to undertake the burden of it. But when a man has been able to lay himself unreservedly on the altar of Christ's service the risks of the position seem rather to lead to that lowly-mindedness which all the Lord's servants need so earnestly to seek after."

*From a sketch of Lord and Lady Overtoun,
published in 1896.*
