PREFACE

IN the preface to his recent book,¹ Schweitzer reaffirms the conclusion announced by him in his previous work,² which was that the proper understanding of Jesus is arrived at only by a thorough-going application to the interpretation of the Gospels of the principle of eschatology, based exclusively upon "the contemporary Apocalyptic." He believes that, in his faithful application of this principle to these sources, he has "created a new fact upon which to base the history of dogma."³ The next task, he thinks, is to "define the position of Paul," which in this connection means to determine whether the Apostle to the Gentiles represents the "first stage of the Hellenizing process," which the history of dogma
