TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS

PRINCE AUGUSTUS FREDERICK;

DUKE OF SUSSEX.

---

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR ROYAL HIGHNESS,

Presumptuous as it may appear in a stranger to Dedicate his humble Work to Your Royal Highness, I was nevertheless emboldened to solicit Your permission to do so, when I considered I was addressing a Prince who, to extensive erudition, has united a refined taste—qualities which have always adorned Your Royal and Illustrious House, the Princes of which have not deemed it beneath their dignity to accept of, and exercise, the Rectorship of three different Universities, and several of whom have immortalized their names in the literary world by their writings; to Your Royal Highness, their descendant, who, with an animating and laudable zeal, not only supports and protects all that is good and noble, all that can contribute to the extension of the sciences, the cultivation of the mind, and the moral improvement of mankind, but, at the same time, by taking a personal and active part therein, gives them firmness and duration,—to You do I venture to dedicate this small production of my pen, the tendency of which is, to shew the elevated station of man in the grand scale of nature; trusting I shall be pardoned for the intrusion on the sole plea, that, according to the laws of identity, the same magnetic power prevails in the ideal, as well as in the real world, by which the little is attracted to the great, and by which influence I am impelled, while, with the most profound and unfeigned respect, I humbly beg leave to subscribe myself,

DEDICATION.

YOUR ROYAL HIGHNESS'S

Most obedient and Most humble Servant,

THE AUTHOR.
