PREFACE.

THIS little work consists of the substance of eight consecutive Sunday evening lectures to my congregation in Kentish Town, London, and it is published at their earnest request.

All the scientific facts that are brought in evidence have been carefully gathered from the most recent and reliable authorities, and as far as possible are stated in the words of the authors of the works from which they are quoted, to whom I beg to express generally my obligation and acknowledgments.

My design was to compress as much as possible of the higher forms of Christian Evidences into the space and time at my disposal; and thus to gather up the best of Science and of Scripture, and lay it as a humble offering at the feet of Jesus Christ, the Creator of Science and Religion, to whom it rightly belongs.
