PREFACE.

IN publishing the following descriptions of the various forms of "Sport" some apology or explanation may be necessary for the last of the series—"Deer-stalking"—the concluding sentences of which were written only a few days before the author's sudden death. It has, therefore, not had the advantage of his personal revision and correction, and may be, to some extent, deficient in the finished style and neatness of expression which were characteristics of his writings. My grateful thanks are due to General Crealocke for his kindness in undertaking the illustration of the book—a work which he began out of regard for an old friend, and which he has completed as a tribute to his memory.
