we dedicate

the sixteenth volume of

Reveille

Greeting:

To our true friends, who ever wish us well; to our "old boys," who cherish fond memories, grave and gay, of their own days at the old college, changed though it may be; to our faculty, past and present, who have so patiently borne with us; and to our mothers, sisters, and sweethearts, who look forward and back again to the rosy joys and proud moments of Commencement;-- from the Senior Class of the Maryland Agricultural College, once rats,--now men: Greeting.

We have joyfully done much evil in our lives; but if we ever did any evil to you, we repent, and ask your forgiveness.

We lay before you our work for the year, in athletic, literary, and social lines. We have labored hard and striven much for success. Bear kindly with our mistakes, which we know are many. To each other, these pages carry a never-to-be-forgotten message. We have worked together. Do not forget us. Make our remembrances to those whose friendship will ever be great gain to us. Farewell.
