NOTE

The papers collected in this volume were written by the author at various times between 1891 and 1903; their unity is that of the point of view. Most of them appeared in one or other of the following publications:—“Belgravia,” the “Gentleman’s Magazine,” “Good Words,” “Macmillan’s Magazine,” the “National Review,” “The Outlook,” the “Pall Mall Gazette,” “Temple Bar,” and the “Woman at Home.” I am indebted to the proprietors of these periodicals for permission to reprint the papers here. The author put her observations into a personal form, but it need not be inferred that every such characterisation is biographical.
