BIBLIOGRAPHY OF MISSOURI.

The following "Bibliography of Missouri" is presented with a realization that such a work is necessarily imperfect. The imperfection is of two kinds; first, the failure to include all works that have been written by Missourians; and, second, the including of works that do not properly belong to Missouri. Of the first there will be many or few instances according to the time spent in preparing the list, the opportunities for obtaining titles, and the diligence with which such opportunities are improved. The second error results from misinformation. In many cases, where the list contains a book by a certain author, librarians have suggested other works by the same author, when the fact was that the publication first noted was published while the author was a resident of the State, and the other works after the author had removed to some other State, which would exclude the latter, unless the author were a native of Missouri. To keep clear of this second imperfection the biography of the authors must be learned so as to know the residence at the time of each publication, and while the author has given the matter careful attention he has no idea that his information has always been correct. Still another imperfection arises from having incorrect titles. It is possible in this way to have the same book under different titles, the one being taken from the title page and the other from a notice of the work, in which it is referred to more from the character of the contents than from the title page. And, in fact, it is sometimes uncertain that the list is correct after studying carefully a letter from the author himself. With few exceptions sermons or speeches have not been included, unless the work mentioned contains a series of such. The list would be more interesting to some persons were it of books relating to Missouri. Such a list should be published, but for present purposes it was thought best to limit the scope of the bibliography as has been done. Additional value is given by noting what books in the list are found in the library of the author, the Mercantile Library of St. Louis, and the Public Library of St. Louis. The 780, the 640 and the 852 titles found in these libraries give the student access to a considerable per cent of the total of 2,300 titles. The works in the library of the St. Louis Medical Association are also noted. Assistance in the preparation of the work is cheerfully acknowledged from the libraries of St. Louis, Kansas City, Jefferson City and others; from the book publishers and book stores, and from Dr. Alexander N. DeMenil, (whose "Bibliography of St. Louis" has greatly aided this compilation), and many other individuals.

Works in the library of the author are marked *, the Mercantile Library †, the Public Library ‡, and the Medical Library ||.
