I DEDICATE this little book to the young people of our British Churches and Sunday Schools. Nothing, during my recent visit to England, gratified me more than to notice the eager attention they paid to missionary addresses; and I felt that it would help them to a better understanding of many missionary details, if they had some general knowledge of the customs and habits of the people of whom they hear. I hope they will accept the following pages as a contribution to this knowledge as it concerns Bengal. I shall be only too glad if the description I have attempted of the scenes and circumstances of missionary labour in this field serve to awaken in them a more intelligent interest in the great work of sending the Gospel through the world.
