FOREWORD.

The following pages present, in condensed form, some of the manifold attractions of "Christian Science." Its history, name, personality, literature, philosophy, theology, therapeutics and doctrines are set forth in all their seductiveness. The proclamation of Christian Science that sin is a delusion of mortal mind, constitutes its crowning attraction. A groaning creation, which has travailed in pain until now, learns that it was mistaken in the symptoms, that pain and suffering, heartache and death—the result of sin—are simply the mistakes of "mortal mind." The message of "Christian Science" that "man is incapable of sin," is a most welcome announcement to the modern transgressor. Soothing, indeed, are these dulcet words, to the consciences of multitudes of sinners, both great and small, who find in this new and attractive "gospel" the "invention" and "discovery" of Mrs. Eddy, mollifying ointment for every wound!
