INTRODUCTION.

At the present time when there must be reviews of titles in periodical literature, the busy professional man is fairly bewildered by the shoals of references setting towards him. From the necessity of the case, he has only time to inform himself of the titles of the books which seem to fall under the scope of his line of study. It is just as much a truism as ever, that the men who are accomplishing results, are the busy men. Because they are so busy, they wish to economize all the time they can with safety. This is the aim of the Bibliography, viz: to enable the clergy and other students of social science, in the first place to familiarize themselves with the leading authorities in their special field, and secondly to present a selected list of references from the very latest writers.

Accordingly each reference contains a sufficient amount of data to enable a busy man to tell at a glance if the book in question is one which he wants, either because the treatment is along his line of study, or the price in accord with the depth of his pocket-book.

In the preparation of the Bibliography, "The Readers' Guide in Economic, Social and Political Science," edited by R. R. Bowker and G. Iles; Poole's Index; "References on the History of Labor and Some Contemporary Labor Problems," by J. Wm. Black, and the "Bibliography of Sociology," by J. R. Commons were consulted. Many of the books mentioned in the Bibliography contain valuable references, especially is this true of Prof. C. R. Henderson's "Dependents, Delinquents and Defectives," and Arthur MacDonald's "Abnormal Man."

This Bibliography will form the greater part of a Hand-Book of Sociological Information concerning New York City, to be issued by the City Vigilance League. By an arrangement with Dr. Josiah Strong, the Secretary of the Evangelical Alliance, it was desired to use the Bibliography at the Chicago Conference of the Alliance in the early part of October. The brevity of time at the disposal of the editors, in order to get the Bibliography in readiness for the Conference, compelled that the scope of the references should be more general, and precluded a detailed statement that would include local movements and institutions in New York City. That ground will be covered by the Hand-Book, to be issued as soon as possible by the City Vigilance League.

For information concerning that publication apply the office of the Secretary, 30 West 61st Street, New York City.
