PREFACE.

THIS unassuming little book is published for the benefit of the young. It is not designed to meet the eye of the critic. Had the writer possessed more leisure, or enjoyed greater freedom from personal affliction, he would have bestowed more labour on it. Under these circumstances, he confidently claims the gracious indulgence of the public.

Should this narrative interest and profit the reader, and increase his determination to support Christian Missions to the Heathen, the end of the writer will have been accomplished.

The author desires to express his obligation to the Rev. Elijah Hoole, D.D., who has kindly undertaken to conduct the work through the press, and to write an Introduction.

JOSEPH WATERHOUSE.
