P R E F A C E.

IN the chapters constituting this little book I attempted week by week, in the Banbury Guardian, during the past season, to give a brief account of the existence and progress of the Warwickshire Hounds since their establishment just a century ago. The interest which was taken in their doings during the appearance of my weekly instalments, tempted me to think the whole might be acceptable in a re-published form. This I now issue, tendering at the same time my most sincere thanks to the many kind friends who have come forward and given me much help and encouragement during the preparation and publication of my work.
