RECOMMENDATORY NOTE

BY

REV. JOHN CUMMING, D.D. OF LONDON.

I LIKE these Tracts, which my dear friend, Mr. BLAKENEY, has prepared, very much. For accuracy of statement, simplicity, and practical usefulness, I think them superior to anything of the kind I have read. Their circulation among the young, in these times, ought to be promoted at any sacrifice or expense.

P R E F A C E .

THIS work contains, it is hoped, a complete refutation of Popery in a short space.

The Author's motto has been—

“ Multum in Parvo.”

Romish dogmas and practices are exhibited from Roman Catholic authorities; and Romish arguments answered fully, but without circumlocution.

The Author has studiously avoided the employment of language which might be regarded as unnecessarily offensive, and has stated, without exaggeration, the peculiarities of Rome.

The utmost reliance may be placed on the extracts and authorities, as they have been either verified in, or taken with great care from, the original works.

This Manual of Controversy is so arranged in chapters, that it may with great ease be thrown into the form of tracts, which, it is hoped, will prove useful to the masses.

Surely, in this day of rebuke and blasphemy, when "Great Babylon" is again holding out her "golden cup" to the nations, it behoves every Christian Protestant to contend earnestly for the "faith which was once delivered to the saints."
