

PRUSSIAN MEMORIES,
1864-1914

Published @ 2017 Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd

ISBN 9780649214273

Prussian memories, 1864-1914 by Poultney Bigelow

Except for use in any review, the reproduction or utilisation of this work in whole or in part in any form by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including xerography, photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, is forbidden without the permission of the publisher, Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd, PO Box 1576 Collingwood, Victoria 3066 Australia.

All rights reserved.

Edited by Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd.
Cover @ 2017

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

www.triestepublishing.com

POULTNEY BIGELOW

PRUSSIAN
MEMORIES,
1864-1914

By Poultney Bigelow

The German Emperor and His Eastern Neighbors.
1890

Paddles and Politics

A Canoe Voyage from the Black Forest to the Black Sea

Border Land of Czar and Kaiser

Studies on Both Sides of the Polish Frontier

Children of the Nations

A Study in Modern Colonization

White Man's Africa

A Study of the Different South African States Immediately after the Jameson Raid

The German Struggle for Liberty

A History, 1806-1848, in 4 Vols.

Prussian Memories

1864-1914

By

Poultney Bigelow, M.A., F.R.G.S.

Author of "History of the German Struggle for Liberty, 1806-1848"

UNIV. OF CALIFORNIA
ALON BARKER LIBRARY

G. P. Putnam's Sons
New York and London
The Knickerbocker Press
1915

COPYRIGHT, 1915
BY
POULTNEY BIGELOW

—
Second Impression

AMERICAN PHOTO-LITHOGRAPH
NEW YORK

The Knickerbocker Press, New York

JUN 7 1884

DD
222
B48 P
Cop. 1

Sib

1/2 34

Plough

INTRODUCTORY

BETWEEN the time of penning this little book and securing a courageous publisher, my sixtieth birthday arrived and brought me into the ranks of the elders. Henceforth I may claim the right to be reminiscent, not to say garrulous. I have crossed the ocean ninety times, three of the trips being under sail. Four times have I circumnavigated the globe—once under sail. I have been in three shipwrecks and as many times have been pronounced dead by expensive men of medicine. My studies have drawn me to every tropical colony, and my travels have been largely afoot, on horseback, or in a canoe. My adventures have been few because it has been my practice to give careful study to the history of the countries I was about to visit. That is probably one reason why my dealings with natives have been uniformly satisfactory—whether in Zululand or Borneo; China or New Guinea; the Black Sea or Baltic. Age has modified my views on many matters, notably on the relative value of man in different climates. It is hard for me to see that one race is superior to another save for a short time under exceptional conditions.

Patriotism is based largely upon the conceit that we are mysteriously gifted with a larger share of virtue or intelligence than has been given to others; that we must conquer other countries, in order to diffuse our wisdom and virtue; that we must plague them with missionaries and commercial travellers until the happy day arrives when all shall rest happily under our flag and the millennium be proclaimed.

We Americans are an almost offensively patriotic people, so far as words and symbols are concerned. We scatter insults and missionaries with wasteful zeal and assume that our high opinion of ourselves is shared by the world at large. Our school children learn this doctrine, which is perpetuated by our colleges, our preachers, our papers, and our seekers after office. We have admitted negroes to citizenship; yet while we have branded as undesirables the disciples of Confucius, our slums are crowded with immigrants from the Mediterranean who constitute a menace to our political future; and we bar our gates against the Japanese, who make a religion of cleanliness and whose lives make their country a byword for chivalry. We have flaunted in the face of Europe a so-called Monroe Doctrine, which forbids the great Powers from introducing stable government among the Latin-American States; and we threaten these Powers with war if they take steps to collect their debts, while we ourselves do nothing to command either fear or sympathy south of the Rio Grande.

There are no surprises to him who studies history and this great war has surprised no one save those who seek their light from the Priests of Pacifism.

The United States has been on the verge of war, for which there has been abundant provocation with Germany,—to say nothing of our neighbours across the Pacific. But had we been as meek as Belgium, our peril could be none the less real. We are a country piled high with dollars and no one to guard them. England so far has acted as our big brother and Germany dares make no move until John Bull is asleep. We should have a permanent peace footing of one million men; and these should be organized, after the Swiss method, as a force of reserves. Every voter should be qualified to take his share in the defence of his country, while he would be called away from his civil pursuits for not more than a few weeks in each year.

The American lad who can not read and write and shoot and ride and swim and do his soldier duty should be barred from the polls and his name posted in public places. There is no good reason why from being a nation of "minute men" under Washington, we now should become so degenerate that in a moment of national danger even the graduates of our naval and military colleges are forbidden to discuss the matter for fear of annoying our enemy.

Germany has her plans for the invasion of this country. She has had these plans for a number of years past, and I have been called visionary each time that I have referred to the matter. It is our duty to be ready, for when Germany makes her raid across the Atlantic she will first exhaust every effort to secure the services of such patriots of the type of William Jennings Bryan. These "prophets of peace" preach peace and disarmament, and when their talking is over they will disappear with the money from their lectures and may next be seen on the Rhine or the Danube carrying in their buttonhole a Red Eagle order of the third class.

When this war closes, Europe will have many soldiers but few dollars; and no nation will need those dollars more than Germany. America will have billions of dollars but very few soldiers.