PREFATORY NOTE.

ETHELBERT DUDLEY WARFIELD, Esq., was elected President of Miami University at the regular annual meeting of the Board of Trustees, on the 21st day of June, 1888, by a unanimous vote. His formal inauguration was postponed by his own desire, and took place at the close of his first year of incumbency, on Thursday, June 20th, 1889, the annual commencement day. In accordance with a time honored custom, observed from the inauguration of the first President of the University, the exercises took place in the open air, beneath the oaks and beeches of the grove at the eastern part of the campus, it being impossible to accommodate the large audience in any hall of the University or the town. The order of exercises was as follows :

INVOCATION, by the REV. JAMES H. BROOKES, D. D., Class of 1853, of St. Louis.

ADDRESS ON BEHALF OF THE ALUMNI, by HON. CALVIN S. BRICE, Class of 1863, of Lima, President of the Alumni Association.

BY

HON. JOHN W. HERRON, LL. D., PRESIDENT.

PRESIDENT HERRON'S ADDRESS.

MY FRIENDS AND FELLOW CITIZENS :

It is now a little more than sixty-four years since the first inauguration of a President of The Miami University took place. In March, 1825, Robert H. Bishop was the leading and conspicuous actor in a performance, having in view the same object as that which engages us to-day. Then was seen the beginning of that educational life to which we are attempting to-day to add new and youthful vigor. How different the scene that greeted the eyes of those who witnessed that inauguration—how few of those who witnessed it are with us to-day.

One present on that occasion has given this description of the scene :

“There was a great crowd at the inauguration : people coming from all the country around for six or eight miles. The yard was full of men, women and children. It was a beautiful day in early spring. There was a procession headed by a band of music,—a big drum and a little drum, two or three fifes, a fiddle or two, a flageolet, and perhaps a brass horn. As they passed through the yard—among the stumps, and around the big building, all were joyous and glad.”

Then the country around was but newly opened ; the population was small and scattered ; the roads were few and badly improved ; the lands but partially cultivated. It was new country still inhabited by the original settlers who had wrested it from the wild beasts, and still fiercer Indian. In such a country, amidst such a population, was planted the Institution which the trustees represent to-day. It was something new, and presented wholly different interests from those which before
