

THE ANCIENT USE OF LITURGICAL COLOURS

Published @ 2017 Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd

ISBN 9780649146277

The ancient use of liturgical colours by C. C. Rolfe

Except for use in any review, the reproduction or utilisation of this work in whole or in part in any form by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including xerography, photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, is forbidden without the permission of the publisher, Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd, PO Box 1576 Collingwood, Victoria 3066 Australia.

All rights reserved.

Edited by Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd.
Cover @ 2017

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

www.triestepublishing.com

C. C. ROLFE

THE ANCIENT USE OF LITURGICAL COLOURS

E. A. Muntz Esq
11th St. J^r Barton Court
Sep. 2 1910

The ancient use of liturgical colours

C. C. Rolfe

parker: and: co: oxford: and: london mdccclxxix

Contents.

Introduction. England, "the island of Saints":—The beauty and costliness of the ancient Church of England vestments:—The irregularity of the existing Church of England use:—The modern Roman sequence:—"The Durham Book":—General outline of the work pp. 1—8

CHAPTER I.

The ancient Mosaic use. The divine command:—Table of the Levitical vestments:—Josephus upon the linen vestment and girdle:—St. Jerome upon the number of the vestments:—Walafrid Strabo, ditto:—Honorius, ditto:—The Patriarch Symeon, ditto:—The shape of vestments differed in different ages:—The number of the Levitical colours:—The symbolism of number five:—Its influence upon the system of the ancient Church:—The use in the time of Solomon pp. 9—17

CHAPTER II.

The use in the first century. Testimony of Josephus:—The blending of the Old Dispensation into the New:—Crake upon early ritual worship:—Liturgical arrangements of plan in the Early Christian Church:—Liturgical uses of the Early Christian Church:—The vision of the Apocalypse:—The Bishop of Lincoln's notes thereon:—Saint John robed like the Priests of old:—The ancient introit for St. John's Day pp. 18—31

CHAPTER III.

The use in the second century. The persecutions necessitated a simplicity of ritual:—The modern theory refuted, that white was "the colour" of the vestments in the Early Christian Church:—The alleged testimony of St. Clement of Alexandria, and Tertullian:—What they allude to:—The modern theory refuted, that the ecclesiastical dress was similar to the civil dress:—Christian art is to be contradistinguished from pagan art:—The ecclesiastical dress, in like degree, is to be contradistinguished from the civil:—Rock upon the toga and pall:—Usage of the Jewish Christians at Pella:—Testimony of Polycrates pp. 32—42

CHAPTER IV.

The use in the third century. The usage during the great persecutions:—Fleury upon the reserve respecting the Mysteries:—The primitive Liturgies:—Rubric in the divine Liturgy of St. Clement:—The mural paintings in the Catacombs do not depict Eucharistic vestments pp. 43—47

CHAPTER V.

The use in the fourth century. Christianity favoured by the State:—Developments in the externals of Religion:—Testimony of Eusebius of Cæsarea:—Testimony of Theodoret:—The same vesture was often used for Baptism as for Holy Communion in the Early Christian Church:—Testimony of St. Jerome pp. 48—53

CHAPTER VI.

The use in the fifth century. The heresiarch Pelagius:—St. Jerome adv. Pelagius:—The use of the purple altar-cloth in the ancient British Church:—Testimony of Gildas:—The traditional use of white vestments at Eastertide:—Bequest of Saint Remigius:—Easter the only season which had its distinctive colour:—Vestments were worn by St. Leo pp. 54—59

CHAPTER VII.

The use in the sixth century. The origin of the use of black in the ecclesiastical system :—Black not used for the sacrificial vestments :—Developments in the use of black :—The Ancient Gallican MS., edited by Martene :—The mitre was worn in the ancient British Church :—The vision of St. Samson :—Testimony of St. Gregory the Great :—The signification of the mystic colours both under the Old Dispensation and under the New :—St. Gregory of Tours mentions the Abbess who cut up a purple altar-cloth to deck out her niece :—Expositio Brevis Liturgiæ Antiquæ :—The scarlet of the Christian Church double-dyed pp. 60—67

CHAPTER VIII.

The Anglo-Saxon use in the seventh century. Our St. Augustine of Canterbury :—Colour of the archiepiscopal pall :—St. Augustine's revised Liturgy :—Excepting the woollen pall St. Augustine did not introduce any fresh vestments into this country :—The purple chasuble was worn in St. Augustine's time :—The Acts of the fourth Council of Toledo :—The ancient chasuble of St. Regnobert :—The vestments found upon St. Cuthbert :—The controversy about St. Cuthbert's relics :—Baring-Gould upon St. Cuthbert's relics pp. 68—80

CHAPTER IX.

The Anglo-Saxon use in the eighth century. The Anglo-Saxons were fond of gay colours in their dress :—The reform in the monastic dress brought about by St. Cuthbert :—The illuminations to the Durham Book :—Origin of the use of green in the system of the ancient Church of England :—Green not used at this period for the sacrificial vestments :—Developments in the use of green :—Testimony of the Ven. Bede :—Purple a favourite colour with the Anglo-Saxon Clergy :—The mitre worn in the Anglo-Saxon Church :—The testimony of Germanus of Constantinople :—The shape of the chasuble in this age was similar to that worn in still earlier times. pp. 81—87

CHAPTER X.

The Anglo-Saxon use in the ninth century. Walafrid Strabo upon the sacred vestments :—The vestments in monastic use were based upon the Levitical system, as were those in diocesan use :—The purple pall given by Michael to Pope Benedict III. for St. Peter's at Rome pp. 88—91

CHAPTER XI.

The Anglo-Saxon use in the tenth century. The 24 copes provided by Abbot Egelric for his Minster :—The chasubles bequeathed by Bishop Theodore :—The chasuble of Saint Oswald :—The vestments provided by Abbot Leoffin for Ely :—The distinction between the episcopal mitre and the abbatial :—“Leofric's Missal” :—The old illuminated MS. Vesp. A. VIII. Mus. Brit. :—The Benedictional of St. Æthelwold pp. 92—101

CHAPTER XII.

The Anglo-Saxon use in the eleventh century. The old illuminated MS. Arundel. 155. Mus. Brit. :—The purple altar-palls presented by Bishop Leofric to Exeter :—The illuminated MS. Lansdown. 431. Mus. Brit. :—The illuminated MS. Tiberius. C. VI. Mus. Brit. :—The illuminated MS. Cotton. Claudius. A. III. Mus. Brit. :—Rock upon Anglo-Saxon vestments pp. 102—106

CHAPTER XIII.

The Anglo-Norman use in the eleventh century. The Norman Conquest :—The spoliation and robbery of Church property at the Norman Conquest :—Vestments filched by the Conqueror from Ely and Waltham :—Foreign Churchmen came into England to beg for vestments :—Saint Osmund :—The origin of "the Sarum use" :—St. Osmund did not introduce any fresh colours into the Church of England :—St. Osmund's rite does not touch upon the colour of the episcopal vesture :—The Salisbury MS. :—De habitu chori per totum annum :—The dress of the Secular Canons :—No sequence of colours in the ancient Sarum use :—Rock upon the shape of the chasuble :—The testimony of Saint Ivo of Chartres :—The colour scarlet typifies charity pp. 107—123

CHAPTER XIV.

The English use in the twelfth century. Neale and Marriott upon the religion of the age :—The influence of the religion of the age on Cistercian art :—The evil influence of the lives of some of the Anglo-Norman Bishops :—The colours green and black used by some Bishops in their Mass vestments :—The illuminated MS. Calig. A. XIV. Mus. Brit. :—The illuminated MS. 10. A. XIII. Mus. Brit. :—The episcopal mitre of the period :—The illuminated MS. Nero. C. IV. Mus. Brit. :—The cope presented by Prior Conrad to Canterbury :—The present of vestments from Abbot Robert to Adrian IV. pp. 124—132

CHAPTER XV.

The English use in the thirteenth century. The germs of infidelity :—The Salisbury inventory :—Bishops wore coloured chasubles, as in the Anglo-Saxon age, even where "the Sarum use" was followed :—The illuminated MS. 2. A. XXII. Mus. Brit. :—The illuminated MS. Vesp. A. I. Mus. Brit. :—"Queen Mary's Psalter" :—Innocent III. upon the colour of vestments :—Irregularities in the Church of England system pp. 133—146

CHAPTER XVI.

The English use in the fourteenth century. The sacrificial vestments were often made from funeral palls :—Will of John de Warren :—Hardyng upon Richard II.'s funeral :—Palls presented at Bishop Kellow's funeral :—The cloths and veils of Lenten use :—Shrouds for the dead :—The vestments bequeathed by William of Wykeham to Winchester :—Remains of Wykeham's mitre and gloves at New College :—The old vestments at St. John's College, Oxford :—R. de Ormsby's Psalter :—Edward III.'s Psalter pp. 147—156

CHAPTER XVII.

The English use in the fifteenth century. "The Bedford Missal" :—The illuminated MS. Harl. 326, Mus. Brit. :—The illuminated MS. Nero, D. VII. Mus. Brit. :—The Bassingbourne inventory :—The cloth of gold palls presented at Prince Arthur's funeral pp. 157—164

CHAPTER XVIII.

The English use in the sixteenth century. Rubric from the Sarum Missal of A.D. 1500 :—The yellow for Confessors' Days an innovation :—The Lincoln inventory of A.D. 1536 :—The Benedictional of Bishop Longland :—Inventory of "olde aulbes," St. Martyne's Priory, Dover :—The Lenten use at St. Frideswide's, at Oxford :—Rock upon the Lenten curtain, &c. :—The Lenten usage of our ancient Church :—The linings of our old English vestments pp. 165—175

CHAPTER XIX.

The use in the time of King Edward the Sixth. "The ornaments rubric" :—The Lincoln inventory of A.D. 1553 :—The raid upon the Lincoln vest-