VERSES AND RHYMES

BY THE WAY.

BY NORA PEMBROKE.

‘These are poor Mungo’s poems, which James Esler and me think excellent; and if any one think otherwise, I wad just thank them to write better at their leisure.’

MANSIE WAUGH.

“ All beneath the unrivalled rose
The lowly daisy sweetly blows;
Though large the forest monarch throws
    His army shade,
Yet green the juicy hawthorne grows
    Adown the glade.”

BURNS.

To Mrs. Arbing,

PEMBROKE.

I dedicate these verses to one whom I hold dear,
One who in the dark days drew in Christian kindness near.
May He who led me all my life do so and more to me
If ever I forget the debt of love I owe to thee.
