

THE TEMPERANCE: AND OTHER
POEMS OF THE LATE HENRY
ANDERTON, OF WALTON-LE-
DALE, NEAR PRESTON, WITH A
SKETCH OF HIS LIFE

Published @ 2017 Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd

ISBN 9780649532308

The Temperance: And Other Poems of the Late Henry Anderton, of Walton-Le-Dale, near Preston, with a Sketch of His Life by Henry Anderton & Edward Grubb

Except for use in any review, the reproduction or utilisation of this work in whole or in part in any form by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including xerography, photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, is forbidden without the permission of the publisher, Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd, PO Box 1576 Collingwood, Victoria 3066 Australia.

All rights reserved.

Edited by Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd.
Cover @ 2017

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

www.triestepublishing.com

HENRY ANDERTON & EDWARD GRUBB

THE TEMPERANCE: AND OTHER
POEMS OF THE LATE HENRY
ANDERTON, OF WALTON-LE-
DALE, NEAR PRESTON, WITH A
SKETCH OF HIS LIFE

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry, no matter how small, should be recorded to ensure the integrity of the financial data.

2. The second part of the document outlines the various methods used to collect and analyze data. It includes a detailed description of the sampling process and the statistical techniques employed to interpret the results.

3. The third part of the document provides a comprehensive overview of the findings. It highlights the key trends and patterns observed in the data, as well as the implications of these findings for the organization.

4. The fourth part of the document discusses the limitations of the study and suggests areas for future research. It acknowledges the potential biases and limitations of the data and provides recommendations for how to address these issues in future studies.

5. The fifth part of the document concludes the report and summarizes the main points. It reiterates the importance of accurate record-keeping and the value of data analysis in making informed decisions.

THE TEMPERANCE
AND OTHER POEMS
OF THE LATE
HENRY ANDERTON,
OF WALTON-LE-DALE, NEAR PRESTON,
WITH A SKETCH OF HIS LIFE,
BY HIS FRIEND AND FELLOW-LABOURER,
EDWARD GRUBB.

---

"Praise famous men, such as by their counsels, and knowledge of learning were meet for the people,—and were wise and eloquent in their instructions, and such as found out musical tunes, and recited verses in writing."—ECCLESIASTICUS xliiv. v. 1 and seq.

---

"A verse may find him who a sermon flies,
And turn delight into a sacrifice."

HERRERT.

---

PRESTON:
PRINTED BY W. AND J. DOBSON, FISHERGATE.
1863.

PR4007
A53T4

TO JOHN GUEST, ESQUIRE, OF MOORGATE GRANGE, BOTHERHAM,
THE FAITHFUL PATRIOT AND STEADY FRIEND
OF
CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS FREEDOM, WHOSE EXERTIONS TO CONSOLIDATE THE BASIS AND EXTEND THE BLESSINGS OF THE TEMPERANCE REFORMATION
BY AN EFFICIENT
ADMINISTRATION AND ENLIGHTENED ADVOCACY, AND SO TO IMPROVE THE
CONDITION AND ELEVATE THE CHARACTER OF THE PEOPLE,
ENCOURAGE THE PHILANTHROPIST TO ANTICIPATE
FROM FUTURE EXERTIONS MORE EXTENSIVE GOOD,
THIS COLLECTION OF THE POEMS
OF
THE LATE HENRY ANDERTON, ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE PRINCIPLES OF THE
FIRST TEMPERANCE REFORMERS, IS INSCRIBED
BY HIS FAITHFUL
AND OBEDIENT SERVANT,
THE EDITOR.

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

21

22

23

24

25

26

27

28

29

30

31

32

33

34

PREFACE.

---

I cannot allow this work to pass from my hands without a brief explanation of the circumstances which induced me to edit and incur the responsibilities of its publication.

A few weeks before his last illness, I saw Mr. Anderton ; he was then, to all appearance, in his usual state of health ; on the 17th of October, I heard by the merest chance that he was dead. At that time I was living in the quiet little village of Acton, near Nantwich, where intelligence of even more exciting events than the death of an individual seldom reached me till it had ceased to interest other people. I anxiously looked out for the temperance publications, hoping to find some honorable mention of Mr. Anderton's early labours. But I was surprised when I found that the conductors of the very publications which professed to be the organs of the movement, allowed such a circumstance as the sudden and unexpected removal from this life of one of the most gifted men who ever espoused their cause to pass without any particular notice. As one of his old friends I shared the desire of many that something should be done to preserve the memory of his excellent deeds and great talents.

During the whole time of my private visits to him, after his retirement from the platform, I never failed to urge him to prepare his speeches and poems for publication, and though he never positively refused to agree to my proposal, he always left the subject for future consideration. I knew that his speeches had been fully written out before delivery in the Cockpit (the original Preston Temperance Hall), and also that in their original composition he had attempted to construct and finish the several parts according to the precepts of the great masters of ancient eloquence. He rested his claims to distinction upon his speeches; his poems cost him no labour, and were merely employed to assist a certain portion of his hearers to retain the leading features of his arguments in a more familiar style.

Not having received any particulars of his illness or death in a direct way, I wrote to his brother for information, and to ascertain whether he, or any one else, had taken steps to bring his speeches and poems before the Temperance friends, for whose instruction and amusement they had been composed. The matter appeared to me so important, that I urged him to give the subject immediate attention. There were some special reasons at the time why his friends should have acted upon my suggestion, and these I did not fail to point out. The peculiarity of his genius, vast as was the popular appreciation of it, was a riddle that could not be solved without his speeches, and I was anxious to see them in print, that we might be in a fit position to determine "What constitutes an oration?" Knowing these to be of great value as to their literary character, I offered my assistance and co-operation to carry out to the fullest any wish the family or friends might have in the matter. To my letter his brother wrote as follows:—"I fear much that Henry did not take care of any of his works. So far as I can judge it will be impossible to collect anything that would fill a volume."

Disappointed but not discouraged at this unexpected intelligence, I began to rely upon my own resources, and, after retracing the memory of early times, put myself into correspondence with such of our friends as I could think likely to possess copies of what he had written. Every one to whom I had written evinced their willingness to entrust all their little treasures to my keeping. The Presler Chronicle and the Alliance Weekly News rendered very valuable assistance in this search. Many of the original poems in this work have been obtained, through the publicity of the two papers named above from the United States, Canada, and Australia. The interval between the several arrivals has been great, indeed, one has come to hand whilst I have been writing this explanation. It now only remains for me to say to those friends who have shown their readiness to assist me by giving up the copies in their possession, that I have done my best to return the obligation by a well-printed and handsome volume. They will now clearly comprehend the difficulties which precluded the appearance of the work at an earlier date, and that the delay, which was unavoidable, has been an advantage. They will be able to see also that my offer to assist others forced upon me the alternative either to disappoint those who were anxious the poems should appear, or to take the responsibility of publishing them at my own risk.

I may remark, further, that many of the poems mentioned in the sketch of his life, are omitted in this collection. It is not necessary