INTRODUCTION.

---

THE following sketch is designed principally for the use of the friends of her of whom it speaks. Such will be glad to have an outline, however feeble, of that character which charmed them so much. To others it may be helpful, marking, as it does, the struggles heavenward of a sister-spirit. It is hoped, therefore, though the sketch is far below the life, that it will be read not merely as a duty imposed by affection, but that much benefit may result therefrom to the reader.

“ She hath escaped all danger now,
Her pain and sighing all are fled ;
The crown of joy is on her brow,
Eternal glories o'er her shed.
In golden robes, a queen, a bride,
She standeth at her Saviour's side,
She sees His face unveil'd and bright ;
With joy and love He greets her soul,
She feels herself made inly whole,
A lesser star amid His light.”
