A BRIEF SKETCH
OF THE
LIFE OF GEN. CHARLES A. BROWNE,
*Formerly Military Secretary to the Government at Madras; afterwards
Honorary Secretary to the Church Missionary Society.*
Accompanied by Personal Reminiscences.
OF
CHRISTIAN LIFE IN INDIA HALF A CENTURY AGO.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"We can commend this unpretending little book to all who desire to obtain some insight into the state of society in India half a century ago; and it shows how much good may be effected by an earnest Christian officer who is not ashamed to show his colours."—Daily Express.

"This little volume is as healthy and manly as it is spiritually-minded."—Morning and Evening Mail.

"The glimpse this narrative give us of the harmony, the happy freedom of intercourse, and the true brotherly sympathy existing among the little groups of Christians in our Indian Empire, makes us sigh, as General Browne did, for something more nearly resembling it among Christians in England."—London Record.

"A Preface to this delightful book has been written by the Rev. Frederick Chalmers, Vicar of Nonington (well known as Rector of Beckenham) . . . open it where one may, appears some interesting incident or quotation."—The Churchman.

"To the biographical sketch, which is itself both interesting and profitable, are prefixed the author's own reminiscences of Indian life, which are still more interesting and ought to be equally profitable."—Church Missionary Intelligencer.

"The Reminiscences are of a delightful sort. This is THE book to put into the hands of young officers."—The Sword and Trowel

"As a present to friends in India, or to persons going out on any voyage, or to young men starting in life anywhere, this work will be truly valuable."—The Watchman and Wesleyan Advertiser.
