THE favourable manner in which the following Clinical Lectures on DISEASES of the PROSTATE GLAND were received by the numerous readers of "THE DUBLIN MEDICAL PRESS," in which valuable journal they were lately published, and the notice taken of them in "THE DUBLIN HOSPITAL GAZETTE," one of the most eminently practical periodicals of the day, have induced the Author to put them together in their present collected form, hoping that they will prove instructive lessons to students, as well as useful guides to junior practitioners, in the diagnosis and treatment of the important diseases with which they deal.
