These articles appeared, practically as here printed, from time to time in "The Philadelphia Public Ledger," and acknowledgment of the courtesy of the editor of that paper is herewith given.

FOREWORD

My friend, Mrs. Winthrop Curtis Knowles, has kindly selected these articles from my writings, thinking that they may help in the daily living and draw some one nearer to God. I herewith express my humble gratitude to her, and pray that her hope may be realized in some measure by the blessing of God.

I am convinced that what we all need in our lives is some simple and direct expression of the will of God as regards everyday problems and trials. We are tired of generalities and confused by deep theological arguments, and we long for sympathetic suggestions and encouraging words. I can only say that what I have written has come from heart-experience. May God grant His blessing, that this little book may bring sunshine on the way to some who are weary and perplexed.
