P R E F A C E.

THESE Sermons, the first-fruits of new work, are printed, partly that I may through them ask for the active sympathy of those among whom I have been called to labour, in the discharge of duties which at the present time may, as it seems, be made by God's blessing of peculiar benefit to the English Church; and partly that I may be myself reminded hereafter in times of failure and despondency of the thoughts which were ministered to me in the first Cathedral services in which I was allowed to take part.

This is not the place to discuss measures of Cathedral Reform, but I cannot refrain from repeating what underlies all that I have here
