PUBLISHER'S ADVERTISEMENT.

IN this little volume we reprint, with consent of the Author, the tenth chapter of his Treatise, NATURE AND THE SUPERNATURAL.

This chapter, taken as a sketch of the self-evidencing, superhuman character of Christ, has attracted much attention ; and we have been solicited, many times over, in the various notices and reviews of the book, as well as by private readers, to give it to the public by itself. This, too, we do the more readily, that it makes a complete whole by itself, and is in a style to be read by multitudes who probably will not undertake to master the more elaborate and difficult argument, of which it is only a subordinate member.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
We assume nothing reported of him to be true, . . .	11
The only character that has a perfect youth, . . .	15
<hr/>
The picture stands by itself,	18
The absurd pictures given of infant prodigies, . . .	31
<hr/>
Jesus the only great character that holds a footing of innocence,	35
<hr/>
The only religious character that disowns repentance,	31
<hr/>
He unites characters difficult to be united, . . .	35
The astonishing pretensions of Jesus,	41
His pretensions enter also into his actions, . . .	44

	PAGE
Nobody offended by these pretensions,	46
What mere man could support such pretensions?	48
Peculiar in the passive virtues,	50
Does not falter in the common trials of existence,	56
His passion, no mere human martyrdom,	57
His agony misplaced, taken as being only a man's,	59
It is, humanly speaking, excessive,	60
The pathology is divine,	63
His defence before Pilate, all that could be made,	65
He undertakes what is humanly impossible,	65
He assumes to set up the kingdom of God among men,	67
His plan covers ages of time,	69
Such attempts not human,	73
He takes rank with the humblest orders of society,	74
No great social architect ever saw the wisdom of it,	75
And still he raises no partisan feeling,	83
No human leader in this,	83
Original and independent as no man is,	87
Teaches by no human method,	91

	PAGE
Warped by no desire to gain assent,	93
Comprehensive, under no human conditions,	94
Could not hold a one-sided view,	95
Clear of all the current superstitions,	98
But no liberalist,	102
His simplicity is perfect,	105
Shining as pure light,	107
Adequately teaches God even to the humble,	108
His morality is not artistic,	111
But intuitive and original,	113
Never anxious for success,	115
Raised and made sacred by familiarity,	118
Our experience of men revered in him,	123
Recapitulation,	125
Did such a being actually exist?	129
Was he a sinless character?	128
Mr. Parker's estimate of him,	130
Mr. Hennel's estimate,	133
Faults charged,	139
Faults supposed and intimated,	141
His invective against the Pharisees,	144
Milton's right of invective,	145
