SMUG'S GHOST.

WHEN with ayrie essence sempiternè
You might a body (now in dust discernè),
I was of many set by for my mirth ;
Good company I lou'd with all my heart
And like a boone companion playde my part :
(It was fore-spoken at my houre of birth.)

Hart-eating sorrow nere with me remainde
While I your shape as I have said retainde,
My cogitations were all ayrie, light :
I neare lou'd hoorder, nor the hoording sinne,
That coyne my labour brought me one day in,
I spent in pleasure ere the next daies night.

Mad Maister Peter, and my red fac'd Host,
My dapper Parson, whom of all I most
Entirely loued for his merry vaine;
And Bancks the miller, that poore thin cheek'd knaue,
That holpe to beare my body to the graue,
Were men of mettle; of a perfect straine.

These men and I, made up a matchlesse crew,
For merry meetings till the ground look'd blew,
Wee'd sit and send our soaking healths about,
Weed sometime theeve together in the darke,
To fetch a feast of venison from the Parcke.

Then grant my ghost this, though our bones be rotten,
Our names may liue and neuer be forgotten.

THE
LIFE AND DEATH
OF THE
MERRY DEUILL OF EDMONTON.

The Introduction; with a description of Maister Peter Fabell.

MAISTER Peter Fabell, otherwise called "The Merry Deuill of Edmonton" (for the many excellent ieafts he did) was a man of good discent: and a man, either for his gifts externall, or internall, inferior to few. For his person he was absolute. Nature had neuer showne the fulnesse of her skill, more in any then in him. For the other, I meane his great learning (including many misteries) hee was as amply blest as any.

Very pleasant, kinde, and free-hearted was hee to or with his familiars: very affable, and curteous to strangers, and very liberal, full of commisseration and
