

THE USE OF MOTIVES IN TEACHING MORALS AND RELIGION

Published @ 2017 Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd

ISBN 9780649304370

The use of motives in teaching morals and religion by Thomas Walton Galloway

Except for use in any review, the reproduction or utilisation of this work in whole or in part in any form by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including xerography, photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, is forbidden without the permission of the publisher, Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd, PO Box 1576 Collingwood, Victoria 3066 Australia.

All rights reserved.

Edited by Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd.
Cover @ 2017

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

www.triestepublishing.com

THOMAS WALTON GALLOWAY

THE USE OF MOTIVES
IN TEACHING MORALS
AND RELIGION

THE USE OF MOTIVES
IN TEACHING MORALS
AND RELIGION

THOMAS WALTON GALLOWAY, Ph.D., Litt.D.
Professor of Zoology, Beloit College

AUTHOR OF
"Text-Book of Zoology"
"Biology of Sex for Parents and Teachers"
"Reproduction," etc.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA

THE PILGRIM PRESS
BOSTON CHICAGO

BV1520
G3

COPYRIGHT 1917
BY FRANK M. SHELDON

NO. 1111
ADVANCED

THE PILGRIM PRESS
BOSTON

To the

REVEREND JAMES WALTON McDONALD

Inspiring pastor of a working church, with a genius for organization;

A preacher, with a sure instinct for fundamentals;

A Christian statesman; a loyal friend; and a modest man;

This study in the methods of the growth of the Spirit

Is affectionately dedicated.

CONTENTS

	PAGE
Chapter I. Educational Methods in Religious Education.
1. The meaning of pedagogy. 2. Is pedagogy applicable to religion and the things of the spirit? 3. The two factors in teaching. 4. The proper relation of these two factors in education. 5. Education and evangelism. 6. A crying need of better methods. 7. Summary	1
Chapter II. Some Principles Accepted in General Education Which Must be Applied in Religious Education.	17
1. Introduction. 2. The unity of human personality; and its corollaries. 3. Good teaching always involves getting from the pupil a complete mental reaction to truth. 4. The self-activity of the pupil is absolutely essential in moral and religious education. 5. The pupil's interest is the surest road to self-activity. 6. The natural instincts, impulses and motives should render their service. 7. Personal satisfaction is the potent agency in all education. 8. There must be the fullest possible grading of all that concerns moral and religious instruction. 9. We must recognize that all education, and in particular moral and religious education, is in a tentative and experimental stage.
Chapter III. Some Essential Natural Elements in Education.	27
1. Personality and environment. 2. Adaptation, or the adjustment of personality to the environment.

3. The place of personality in life and education. 4. The beginnings of personality. 5. The enrichment of the elements of personality. 6. Structure of mature personality. 7. Choice is the critical thing in personality. 8. Two chief ways of influencing choice. 9. Training choice by impression. 10. Training choice through expression. 11. Real moral teaching involves both impression and expression. 12. Results of impression and expression on the other internal qualities

Chapter IV. The Principle of Motivation in Education. 55

1. The impelling nature of desires in life. 2. These natural impulses and desires are legitimate. 3. The attitude of the educator toward these desires. 4. The meaning of motivation. 5. Relation of "motivation" to some other watchwords of the teacher. 6. The two-fold test of the value of a natural impulse. 7. An enumeration of some of the principal impulses, instincts and desires that furnish motives in life. 8. Application of motivation in general education

Chapter V. Motivation in Sunday-school Teaching. 71

1. Of what importance to the Sunday schools is this search for motives? 2. The impulses and religious education. 3. The applicability of motivation to moral and religious education. 4. Some practical reasons why an appeal to the natural motives of the child is necessary in Sunday schools. 5. The use of motives is especially necessary because of the limited opportunity of the Sunday-school teacher. 6. The use of motives is peculiarly necessary in Sunday school because of the artificiality of much of our moral and religious teaching

Contents

ix

	PAGE
Chapter VI. A Study of the Natural Motives.	81

1. Introduction: Shortcomings of our present inducements. 2. Vague motives; their weakness. 3. Low motives; their weakness. 4. Appeals too lofty or too remote. 5. Summary of the instinctive elements to which we may appeal

Chapter VII. Motivation in the Instructional Side of Sunday-school Work.	93
-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	----

1. The two aspects of education: instruction and expression. 2. The pupil's part in impression: attention. 3. Motivation of attention. 4. Peculiar value of receptiveness in moral and religious education. 5. The religious effect of partial reception of truth. 6. The effect of proper motivation upon the degree and quality of reception. 7. Sunday-school work has been chiefly instructional; but even this has not been well motivated. 8. Natural discrepancy between child motives and adult motives. 9. Our specific task. 10. Some impulses that may furnish motives for learning

Chapter VIII. Motivating the Expressive Side of Sunday-school Work.	111
------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	-----

1. Summary. 2. The greater meaning of expression in education. 3. Education of choice is the heart of moral and religious education. 4. More important to motivate expression than impression. 5. Superior motivation possible in expression. 6. Essential to find right motives in educating by expression. 7. Some of the natural impulses which may serve as motives for expression

	PAGE
Chapter IX. Certain Principles to Guide the Teacher in his Appeal to Motives.	125
1. Review of the natural motives. 2. Selection of appropriate motives. 3. Egoistic impulses arise early. 4. Later origin of the unselfish motives. 5. How reconcile these? 6. Legitimate use of the self-seeking impulses. 7. What we most need to learn. 8. The Sunday-school dilemma. 9. The upward-looking impulses. 10. Superiority of natural over artificial appeals. 11. Summary
Chapter X. Forms of Expressive Work Suitable to Sunday Schools	137
1. Review of the principle of expressional work. 2. Grades of expressional work in the Sunday school. 3. Forms of hand-work suitable to the Sunday school. 4. Summary: The service that hand-work renders
Chapter XI. Forms of Expressive Work: Representation.	149
1. The essential nature of this form of expression. 2. The dramatic and play instincts in the child. 3. The qualities on which these instincts depend and the states to which they minister. 4. The use of this in Sunday school. 5. Forms of biblical representation. 6. Summary of the educational value of the drama in Sunday-school work. 7. Worship as an expressive activity .
Chapter XII. Forms of Expression: Original Personal Behavior.	163
1. Introduction. 2. Furnishing motives for conduct, or practise in righteousness. 3. An illustra-	