IT is time Science be heard in the discussion of man's moral relations here and immortal relations in the hereafter. Having driven metaphysics from the field of matter, it essays to enter the realm of spirit, accounting for mental and moral results by unvarying law. Over this mysterious domain exact knowledge extends its sway. If there is a spirit-world, it is governed by fixed laws. If there is a spirit-existence, it must be evolved out of physical life according to determinate methods, and all moral principles must have their bases in the constitution of the world.
