PREFACE.

THE following poems were written during the little leisure afforded by education, at a public school, and under the age of sixteen; they are not now published in consequence of the wishes of partial friends, but several of the smaller productions having been favourably received in a periodical work, the whole have been drawn from the desk, where they were deposited, and given to the world.

In doing this, no spark of presumptuous hope whispers that fame will be acquired ;—the poet of sixteen can only expect that the critic will kindly point out his defects, and, if merit exist, give encouragement for future efforts.
