PREFACE

Now that my story has been completed, I deliver it to the world—critics along with the rest; but I have not entertained the hope of being able to offer a faultless production. If I were able and should do so, I fear an infallible story would hardly be appreciated by a fallible world. I have aimed particularly at clearness and interest, with the hope of adding a bit of inspiration to the populace who have proved, through the ages, to be the true custodians of moral rectitude and international beneficence. So here is the story, errors and all. If it fulfills its purpose and is received, I shall be satisfied; if it does not and is rejected, I will not complain.
