ACT I.

SCENE, an Apartment in the Castle of COUNT MOOR.

Enter COUNT and FRANCIS.

Fra. BUT are you well, my father?—you look so

Con. Quite well, my son. What tidings do you bring the Fra. The post is arrived.—A letter from our correspondent at Leipzig—

Con. (With eager anxiety.) Does it contain any account of my son Charles?

Fra. It does; but I fear, if you be ill—if you feel in the smallest degree disordered, allow me—I will communicate the matter to you at a more proper time. (Half aside.) This intelligence is ill adapted to the ear of a feeble, sickly father.

Cou. Heavens ! What can he mean ?

Fra. First let me step aside, and drop a tear of pity for my poor lost brother. I ought to be mute—for he is your son. I ought to conceal his disgrace—for he is my brother:
